

The World's Luckiest Man?

"Luck, is when careful preparation meets opportunity," said a man who made a living from writing books about how to win competitions run by soap and other manufacturers.

Most people reckon luck to be something random – a 'gift from the gods', as it were. But what enabled the pilot to escape? Was it 'luck', as most people mean it – pure chance? Was it that a man with great skill suddenly had the opportunity to use that skill? Or was it more? Was it that the pilot, like all human beings, is immortal until his life allocation - as set by his Maker - is used up?
